Works in Progress

- The First Amendment and a Right to Know About the Government – Argues that courts should recognize a First Amendment right of access to certain categories of government information and that the seeds for a such a right already exist in the Supreme Court’s First Amendment jurisprudence.
- Untangling Government Use of Social Media: Public Forums on Private Platforms – Examines the First Amendment issues that arise when government employees use privately owned social media platforms for official purposes, including the extent to which such use of private infrastructure implicates the state action doctrine.

- Digital Feudalism: Technology, Private Power and 21st Century Serfdom – Book manuscript that examines the expansion of private power over public discourse; argues that the First Amendment will play a less important role in protecting speech online and that future battles over freedom of expression will increasingly occur in the realms of technology, markets, and social norms.
